Termites eat non-stop for 24 hours a day!

Termites, also known as 'white ants' in Singapore, is a challenging pest to manage as they may come from underground and can enter cracks as small as 0.4mm! Termites consume cellulose materials and rarely come to the surface to feed. A silent destroyer, it may become too late when you start to notice them.

Today, most home owners spend effort, time and investment to spruce up their home. A home is more than just a roof for family, and comfort, aesthetics and safety form critical elements in their home design.

As the expectations rise among residents, quality of home condition, such as infrastructure and overall cleanliness becomes essential during decision making process when purchasing a property. In some cases, an assessment of the property structure is made, to ensure potential termite infestation is being ruled out.

A single bed bug can convert into an infestation in just 10 weeks!

Bed bug infestations are on the rise globally. One main factor is due to the increase in global travel across many countries and people as bed bugs are often found in lodging areas. Bed bugs and their eggs are carried in on travelers' clothes and suitcases.

Bed bugs are known to be challenging to treat as they shelter in the narrowest of gaps such as seams of mattresses, bed frames, headboard, and curtains or behind furniture. Finding DIY solutions by your own to get rid of bed bugs prove to be ineffective and risk re-infestations.
